THE Book Mark

By JANE VOILES

After listening to the news broadcasts or reading the latest newspaper headlines, somehow we all feel that it is the personal responsibility of each one of us to make an effort to understand a little more clearly what is happening today.

Two new books by specialists will give you an insight into the position of the United States in the present crisis. One is "A Foreign Policy for America" by Charles Beard who believes that America should stay at home, the other is "Isolated America" by Raymond Leslie Buell who takes the opposite point of view. "We must avoid world adventures" declares Mr. Beard, "we must concentrate on overcoming the grave economic and social crisis at home." On the other hand, Mr. Buell advises—the United States, first "to plot out the kind of world settlement which will safeguard the interests it cherishes and decide what contribution it will make to such a settlement. Second, it should carefully watch or even attempt to shape international developments, so that when the right opportunity arises, effective mediation on its part will have a chance of bringing about such a settlement."

An informative little book is Somerset Maugham's "France at War." It is an excellent and a sympathetic piece of reporting upon what the French are doing to defend their country and how they are keeping the home fires burning. It is only 111 pages long, yet it gives a vivid picture of conditions in France today by one who understands and loves the country and its people.

As a relief from books on the present cirsis, read "My Ten Years in the Studio," by George Arliss. If you have seen Arliss on the stage or screen, you will know that it is "Arliss speaking" after the first few sentences as he invests his writing with the rhythmic phrases of his speech, in fact, his writing seems to convey the very inflections of his voice. Urbane and reticent, Arliss does not go in for spectacular statements or intimate confessions. He is content to record the routine happenings of his years in the studios, but routine is never dull with Mr. Arliss as you will discover once you have begun to read his book.

George Arliss went to work for Warner Brothers in 1928. Although he had achieved top rank as an actor on the legitimate stage, he did not go into pictures with a nose-in-the-air attitude. It has been a rich, new experience for him in which he has been able to utilize much of his stage technique. Fans of Mr. Arliss will find a detailed account of all the talking pictures he has made from "Disraeli" to "Dr. Syn." When Mr. Arliss is looking for a picture, it is not enough that he finds an interesting story. The picture must have what he calls plus value, it must contain the presence of some condition or character that the audience can apply to its own knowledge or experience in life.

Paying tribute to friends and associates is the very breath of life to Mr. Arliss. People prominent on stage and screen troop in and out of the book. Admirers of Bette Davis will be glad to know that Mr. Arliss believes she is the most important star on the screen today.

Although Mr. Arliss is reticent about much in his private life, he reveals the happiest kind of companionship with his wife Flo Arliss who, by the way, has appeared in several of his pictures. The household pets come in for their share in commendation even though they always give their allegiance first to Mr. Arliss. In her time the parrot Dinky was devoted to her mistress as the dog Sadie Thompson is today. Both Mr. and Mrs. Arliss are active in the anti-vivisection society; at the time of writing his book, Mr. Arliss was president of the organization.

First and foremost, Mr. Arliss is the professional actor. Just as the physician is interested in his patient and the lawyer in his client, Mr. Arliss is interested in his audience. But beneath the routine record of life in the studios you will sense the man himself whose manners and speech have have been the admiration of thousands; beneath the simplicity you will feel the richness of tone and accent and be fully aware of the judgment and the inner poise that distinguish George Arliss.

Mrs. Silvio Ronzone and children are here for a few week's visit with the Richard Ronzone family.

COUNTY'S GOLD FA!R FEATURE

Exhibit Will Dominate Minerals Display In Counties' Building

El Dorado County's display of gold will dominate the display of minerals in the Sacramento Valley and Tahoe Region Building at the 1940 world's fair, opening Saturday at Treasure Island.

This is according to Chamber of Commerce Secretary Wallace M. Ripley, who was at Treasure Island Friday to install the exhibit. Mr. Ripley said late Thursday afternoon that developments have resulted in the minerals display by some other counties being curbed and the result is that El Dorado County's entry will be the principal gold display.

Ripley expressed hmself as being delighted with the gold entered for exhibition in behalf of El Dorado County and foresaw the possibility of setting up a very attractive display.

Among the agencies and individuals who have contributed gold for display in the exhibit are:

Alex Revaz, beautiful nuggets taken from the grass roots in his orchard in Placerville;

Russell J. Wilson, twenty-seven pieces of beautiful high-grade from the Black Oak mine at Garden Valley, value $8,000;

Leo C. Burger, nuggets and pocket gold;

Heusner Brothers, wire gold and the now famous Sea Horse nugget and other nuggets;

Bank of America, Placerville branch, the famous "Fish Nugget" and a tray of $5,000 worth of other nuggets;

Alhambra-Shumway Mine, a piece of high-grade said by the State Division of Mines to be the richest ore ever mined in California;

County of El Dorado, quartz and free gold from the Georgetown district, and,

General Dredging Company, $1,000 in gold from Coloma.

Fruit Vote Ends On Monday

Balloting On Amendments To Pact Is Being Conducted By Mail

SAN FRANCISCO — With mail balloting on amendments to the California peaches well under way, U. S. Department of Agriculture officials in an announcement issued today, stressed the fact that all ballots mailed must be post-marked prior to midnight, May 27.

Growers who did not receive ballots by mail were to vote Thursday and Friday at local County Agricultural Conservation Committee offices.

Requested by the California deciduous tree fruit industry and tentatively approved by the Secretary of Agriculture following public hearings, the proposed amendments provide for: (1) Methods of voting for, and for qualifying, committee members; (2) Methods of voting for, members; (2) compensation and expenses of grower members of committees in the performance of duties other than attending regular meetings; (3) committees authority to delegate certain duties to a manager under prescribed restrictions; (4) unfair methods of packing Elberta peaches; (5) slight modification of daily shipment regulation; and (6) reporting of price information by shippers.

The amendments, as tentatively approved, can be made effective by the secretary if the amendments are signed by shippers of at least 67 per cent of the fruit shipped by signers of the original agreement and if at least two-thirds of the growers who vote, by number or by volume, favor issuance of the amendments to the order.

While growers vote in the present referendum on the issuance of an order covering the amendments, the proposals are being submitted to handlers for their signatures.

The program, which has been in effect since May 29, 1939, regulates the handling of these fruits in interstate and foreign commerce.

Lloyd L. Vye has resigned as educational advisor at Mosquito CCC Camp and will start in Monday as a salesman for the Placerville Automobile Company.

Mrs. Fred H. Madigan is here from Sacramenuto to spend a few days with her brothers, Cecil and Clarence Barker, and their families.

POSTOFFICE ENGINEER IS CALLED TO WASHINGTON

Building Sixty Per Cent Complete; Present Schedule Provides For Occupancy Late In August; Ross Assigned To New "Air Park"

Frank E. Ross, construction engineer for the Federal Works Agency, Public Buildings Administration, in charge of work on the new Placerville postoffice, has been called to Washington for other duties and will be succeeded by D. J. Evans, who is being transferred to Placerville from an assignment in Yuba City.

Mr. Ross disclosed Friday morning that the Placerville Postoffice building is about sixty per cent complete and that the present schedule provides for occupancy of the building late in August.

His new assignment will take him to the federal government's projected new "Washington National Airport," the buildings of which are to be built by the Federal Works Agency of the Public Buildings Administration.

John M. Carmody is the administrator of the Federal Works Agency W. E. Reynolds is Commissioner of Public Buildings. Louis A. Simon is supervising architect and Neal A. Melick is supervising engineer.

The airport is intended as a model for future airport development throughout the country and Mr. Ross states that he is very happy to have been called to have a part in the development of the project.

It will be located on the south shore of the Potomac River on a site reclaimed from a large marshy area, and only ten minutes from the heart of the capital.

Designated as an "air park," owing to its size and elaborate equipment, it was conceived with the idea that it would be a part of the National Parks System and of the capital group of buildings. The project involves the relocation of two miles of the Mt. Vernon Memorial Highway, construction of a new bridge, terminal buildings and hangars; a car parking area for eight thousand cars and a grandstand for 3,000 spectators.

The project will embrace a total of 750 acres of which 520 acres will be devoted to the air field. There will be four runways, the longest being 6,875 feet, all 200 feet wide.

The site of the development was normally under two or three feet of water which under flood conditions became twelve feet deep. The land has been built up by hydraulic dredges and by cutting down a fifty-foot hill adjoining the site.

Architecturally, the airport buildings will embody a reminiscence of Mt. Vernon with some of the classicism of the government buildings. Mr. Ross' work will be supervisory in connection with these buildings. His specialty is architectural concrete.

Among Mr. Ross' California assignments to supervisory work in architectural concrete were the Los Angeles postoffice annex, in which 40,000 yards of architectural concrete was used; the Los Angeles federal jail; Maywood Postoffice, Santa Monica postoffice, San Francisco Federal office building, and the Placerville postoffice. He also has served with the federal Bureau of Reclamation on the Parker Dam project on the Colorado River, with the U. S. Engineers on the Bonneville Dam, and in general construction on postoffice buildings at Seattle and Portland and a courthouse in the latter city.

The Public Buildings Administration of the Federal Works Agency plans, lets contracts for, supervises the erection of and maintains such national projects as federal office buildings, postoffices, courthouses, border stations, quarantine stations, appraisers stores and warehouses, hospitals, airports, penitentiaries, foreign legations, etc.

Mr. Ross will make the trip east via Long Beach, to join his family there, who will accompany him to Washington, where he is expected early in June.

GEORGETOWN'S HELP NOTED

Native Sons Of North Side Joined In Invitation For Convention Next Year

Although the news reports up to this time have been "all Placerville" in connection with the winning of the 1941 convention of Native Sons for El Dorado County, delegates from Placerville Parlor at Bakersfield reported Friday morning that Georgetown Parlor No. 91, of Georgetown, shared in extending the invitation to the Grand Parlor.

"William Breedlove represented Georgetown Parlor and Georgetown joined with Placerville in inviting the Grand Parlor here next year," Sheriff George M. Smith, who attended the recent convention, said.

"It is too bad that this feature was over-looked by the newspapers because both parlors joined in presenting the invitation and we worked together all the way through and were successful.

"Hollywood and Long Beach both had prepared invitations to the Grand Porlor to meet with them next year, and we were very much pleased to see both of these proposals withdrawn in favor of the invitation from the two parlors in El Dorado County."

Trout Census Announced

El Dorado County Lakes To Be Part Of Study By U. S. Forest Service

SAN FRANCISCO—The tally of California trout from national streams won't be as extensive or complete as the population census being taken this year, but for ardent fishermen the trout counts probably will hold more immediate significance.

The U. S. Forest Service in cooperation with other fish management agencies has established three creel census projects in as many national forests of the state: at Squaw Creek on the Shasta National Forest; above Kernville and the Isabella Ranger Station on the Kern River, on the Sequoia National Forest and in the high mountain lakes of Eldorado National Forest. As in other census projects this information will be used in determining future fish-plantings that will bring maximum results for the anglers' efforts.

Creel census studies are considered a necessary step toward the best possible management of sport fishing. The success of the work to date has largely been due to the cooperation of sportsmen anglers.

OUR CORRESPONDENT

He done it, boys, he done it! Wally Meyers, our local tennis star, who has achieved the amazing record of going through an entire season of Mother Lode competition without losing a single set, has added the CIF trophy to his laurels, winning from an opponent from Sonora last Wednesday by 6-1, 6-1. According to "Head Racqueteer" Ramsey, "Wally showed the best form seen in the Mother Lode in the past seven years. He had a steady game, a terrific serve, and a hard smash which outclassed his sturdy opponent."

The interscholastic tennis tournament is progressing rapidly, Jerry Davis has advanced to the finals, while Wally Meyers, the favorite, has yet to play Dick Cribbs in the semi-finals.

LAUNDRY PLANT DRAWS JANE BARTON'S COMMENDATION

Jane Barton, in conducting a survey of the American Laundry and Dry Cleaning Plant at No. 7 Sacramento Street declared it to be one of the most complete, and up-to-date she has seen anywhere during her spring tour of Northern California.

She made special comment of the three new apparel steam pressing machines, designed for the finishing house dresses, uniforms and washable trousers. In addition there is also a new handkerchief presser, which makes for rapid production. Two lines of shirt finishing units are capable of turning out forty finished garments an hour. "Clothes come out spic and span, looking like new," Mrs. Barton said.

Roger Douvres, owner and operator of the laundry and dry cleaning firm announces that "the run" up the road to the summit has been started, with additional call for and delivery service to all parts of the county except the northside. Three trucks are in the fleet, one in town and two outside.

In the two plants there are a total of fourteen employees with an annual payroll of nearly $12,000.

Services include: complete linen supply, dry cleaning, alterations, dyeing and seven different laundry finishes.

BRITAIN MAY USE GUNS OF SALVAGED WARSHIPS

LONDON, (UP)—The guns of the wrecked British destroyer Gypsy may yet avenge the deaths of 30 of her crew members.

The Gypsy, built four years ago for $1,500,000, struck a magnetic mine last November 21 and sank in shallow water off the east coast.

Salvagers removed the 4.7-inch guns and smaller armament for transfer to other warships.

During the last war, a destroyer, the Nubian 11, was built from two halves of the wrecked destroyers Zulu and Nubian.

"BALALAIKA," WITH NELSON EDDY, ENDS SATURDAY AT EMPIRE; WILL BE SUCCEEDED BY "ROAD TO SINGAPORE," OPENING SUNDAY

There's plenty of variety in the weekend film fare at the Empire: music, action and comedy in the Friday and Saturday bill, and on Sunday there's Dorothy Lamour with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope in "Road to Singapore."

The Friday-Saturday program features Nelson Eddy in "Balalaika," with Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Lionel Atwill and a large supporting cast. Second Picture on the bill is "Chip of the Flying U," in which frontier justice triumphs over the bad hombres.

The offering for Sunday and Monday has prompted the revelation that the skimpy tropical drape which everyone has been calling Dorothy Lamour's sarong, isn't a sarong at all; it's a sinjang, by authority of none other than Prince Raden Waluyah, nephew of the Sultan of Surukarta, who recently visited the Paramount lot while the "Road to Singapore" was in production.

Sinjang or sarong, it's the vehicle for a lot of laughs when Hope and Crosby "go native" in one of the sequences.

CRIMSON WARNING

by RICHARD SALE

© 1936 by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Jane Hall, girl detective, is summoned to the home of Emery Harding on Skeleton Island, off Maine, to guard his daughter Audrey, whose life has been threatened in a letter, typewritten in red, demanding that Harding relinquish a valuable ruby he bought from an old sea captain Albert Santrey. He also sends for his friend Bruce Kirby, young museum curator, who identifies the ruby as a historic gem believed to have been part of Captain Kidd's loot, and makes the startling suggestion that Kidd's treasure is buried on the island! Santrey is murdered; then one of the servants. When Robert Castian, one of the numerous house guests, is caught supposedly trying to get the ruby, he is handcuffed to his bed, though he insists he knows nothing about the murders. Then Harding is attacked, and hovers between life and death. When Jane and Kirby find Castian gone, having picked the handcuffs with a hairpin, they realize he could have made the attack on Harding.

CHAPTER XXIV

JANE unlocked the other cuff from the bedpost and tried to stuff the bracelets into her bag. They wouldn't fit. She decided to carry them in her hand.

"But where can he go?" she demanded. "Can he get away from the island?"

"He might," said Kirby. "I'll see."

He walked to a house telephone on the wall, removed the receiver, and pressed a button marked "Servants' Quarters." In a few seconds, a voice answered.

"I want to speak to Mr Benet Mr. Kirby speaking."

"This is Benet. What's wrong, Mr. Kirby?"

"Say. Fred, will you run down to the boathouse and see if both the speedboats are there?"

"Sure thing!" said Benet. "What's happened?"

Kiry told him everything that had occurred ending with the news of Castian's escape.

"I'm afraid he may have taken one of the boats to try to make the mainland. It's urgent that he be caught."

"I'll go right down to the boathouse," said Benet excitedly "Phone you back as soon as possible."

"Righto."

KIRBY hung up and faced Jane. "Where's Adele Castian?"

"I don't know. She was in the living room."

"Let's see her."

They went down. Madame Le Roux and Audrey were just getting ready to retire. No one else was in the room.

"Where's Mrs. Castian?" asked Kirby.

"Isn't she in her room?" Audrey queried.

"No," said Jane.

"That's queer. She said she was going to bed."

"She did!" exclaimed Kirby.

"Mon Dieu, Monsieur Kirby," said Madame Le Roux, "what is wrong with that? She may have wandered out on the veranda."

"No; she isn't there, either.' said Kirby. "It's darn strange. Did Mrs. Straater retire too?"

"Oh. yes; quite a while ago."

"Well, thanks," said Kirby "Good night."

"Bon nuit, mes enfants. Do not stay up too late. Tomorrow is another day, you know."

Jane and Kirby waited until Aubrey and the Frenchwoman had gone upstairs, then followed, returning to Castian's room.

HARDLY had they entered, when the house phone buzzed. Kirby leaped to it.

"Hello!"

"Mr. Kirby," said Benet, "one of the boats is gone. He must have taken it. Loaded it up with gas, too. There are a couple of empty tanks in the boathouse."

"Confound it!" said Kirby "Flown the coop! How far is it the mainland?"

"Twenty-two miles. Er—there's the plane. Mr. Kirby Want to chase him?"

"Can't. Have to stay here."

"Say," said Benet, "I'll go after him, Mr Kirby!"

"What can you do from the ship?"

"I'll scare the living daylights out of him," vowed Benet. "Man you don't know what I can do with that plane. I'll force him to turn around and come back"

"Okay," said Kirby. "If you want to try."

"And say," said Benet. "telephone to Elmville and get hold of the sheriff They can keep a lookout for the speedboat in case I miss it."

"I'll do that." said Kirby. "Good luck, youngster—and thanks."

HE HUNG UP and went to the outside phone to try to get the mainland. He was met with absolute silence. The line was dead. He swore under his breath and turned to Jane.

"The wires have been cut!"

Jane looked at him helplessly "Now what?"

Kirby sighed. "I don't know We should have called before But in all the excitement I completely forgot about it. Why don't you head into bed. young lady? You must be dog tired."

"I am." She made a wry face. "But I don't feel like sleeping. I wish I could be sure Castian is the killer and that he is en route to the mainland!"

"Why?"

"I'd close my eyes with the idea of opening them again tomorrow And I'd feel better about you."

"Oh," said Kirby. "Think the killer may still be on the prowl?"

"If he's still on Skeleton Island yes. Why shouldn't he? You and I know a secret. Bruce that has caused the death of two persons."

"The treasure?"

"Exactly."

"In that case, Ludwig is also in danger. Especially since an attempt was made on his life."

Jane let a ghost of a smile flit across her lips.

"I have not the slightest doubt that Ludwig is safely entrenched behind barred doors tonight!"

"DON'T LET this business get you down," Kirby said. He stared at her for a moment without seeing her. "You know, Jane Castian tricked us."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, after all, if the story he told were true, why should he run away? What had you against him? Not murder. At least, not any more than against any one else on the island. Not theft. He did not actually steal anything The only charge you had against him was being in his host's room without permission. He pulled the wool over our eyes with that cock-and-bull story about how he was up against the wall for using company funds and was just after the ruby. His runnng away can mean but one thing—that he's the murderer. not just a would-be jewel thief."

"That doesn't necessarily follow," said Jane. "He may have run away, not because he was afraid of a murder charge but because he was afraid of those authorities who would get him for fraudulent use of funds."

"Oh, of course." sighed Kirby "Lord, but I'm getting dull! I'm going to stop thinking about it for the night. Jane, why don't you go to bed?"

"I will," she replied. "And the devil with murder! If any one wants to do away with me, let him! I'm so tired. I don't care!"

Kirby went with her down the hall to the door of her room.

"Good night," he said, and kissed her.

"Good night—darling."

SCHOOL BOYS IN BRITAIN ARE RECRUITED AS "VICTORY FARMERS"

LONDON, (UP)—Britain has "recruited" school boys in the "dig for victory campaign" to forestall the food queques of 1917.

At swank Eton and Harrow the boys will drop their cricket bats to pick up hoes and doff the "old school tie" and don overalls to aid the farmer harvest the new wartime acres now under the plow.

The boys will come from all classes, from the so-called "public" or private schools, from secondary and elementary institutions. Under the influence of the war they will get "mixed in," the boy who may some day affix a title to his name toiling beside the munitions worker's son.

This new farm front will supplement the Women's Land Army. The boys will range in age from 14 to 17. Many already are taking up "farm lessons" along with their algebra, history and grammar.

The plan was devised by the minister of agriculture. Figures issued recently revealed that the campaign to place under cultivation 2,000,000 additional acres had fallen short of the mark. This was attributed in part to a shortage of labor.

BARBER MISSES OLD DAYS OF INDIVIDUAL SHAVE MUGS

ALBION, Mich., (UP) — Frank Pierce, a barber for 48 years, paused to reminisce on barber shop customs of years ago when mustached quartets vocalized the virtues of Adeline and customers read the Police Gazette.

"There've been a lot of changes since then, and a lot of improvements," Pierce recalled, "but I sort of miss the old days."

He mentioned the "cup shops" where each patron had an individual mug. "Some of them came in for a shave so seldom the mugs collected a lot of dust," Pierce declared. "Altogether, getting rid of the separate mug idea was a labor saver. We used to spend hours cleaning the pigeonholes where the mugs were kept," he said.
